Introduction

How do people feel about drugs in your country/culture?

Does your country have drug dealers? How do people feel about them?

What is the law in regard to the sale of drugs in your country?

A Secret Life

Read Chris's story below:

I sell drugs.

I make no bones about it, that is what I do. I am a drug dealer.

Do I carry a gun and wear a leather jacket? No, don't be silly.

I don't have any tattoos either and I studied hard at school. I went to university and I got a degree.

But I drifted into the world of drug-dealing and here I am. It's what I do now.

The reason I do it is very simple — money.

I can make three or four times what I was making before in my old job. And I had a very good job, I was working in a company that helps other companies find the right kind of staff. I was well-paid.

But I started buying certain drugs for the weekend — a little weed here, some cocaine there — and friends would start to ask me to help them out. So I did. I had to get some money from them, of course.

I then realised that this was turning into a very lucrative enterprise. I was soon making more money in a few hours than I did working a very long day in my old job.

So I quit my job and became a dealer full-time.

My parents don't know anything about it — it would kill them if they knew.

And many of my friends don't really understand what I do. I am very quiet about it and keep it undercover.

But now that has become a great business for me.

I work mainly on the weekends. I can guarantee from Thursday evening right through to Sunday morning I am flat out. I don't have time to sleep properly. That is the time when I make most of my profits.

By Sunday evening, I am exhausted and I crash into bed. I sleep right through to Monday night or sometimes Tuesday morning. Then I have two days to prepare for it all again.

I won't do this forever. Making this into a life-long career is a mug's game. I plan to only do this for another five years or so. Make enough money to set up my own business and then leave the world of drugs behind me.

It's too risky.

There is always the chance of getting arrested and I have had a couple of close calls. But also I don't like the people that sell drugs or take them.

I've met some really shady characters and I often have to deal with them, do business with them, but I don't really like them at all. They are arrogant and kind of stupid.

And I have seen other people ruin their lives with drugs. They lose their jobs, homes — relationships. I just think it's not worth it.

Yes, five more years and I will have saved quite a large sum of money.

Then I will stop all of this and get back to a normal life.

Exercise

Write down all the words and phrases in your vocabulary notebook. Look in your dictionary and find the meaning of each word. Write the definition next to each word.

Then make up your own sentences using each word or phrase.

For example:

Notebook—a small book with pages of blank paper that students use to make notes when studying.

“I left my notebook at home so I was unable to make any notes in my English class.”

Discussion Questions

What do you think of Chris's story?

Do you think Chris is stupid to do this?

What are the risks of doing this kind of business?

What are the rewards?

Do people like this exist in your country? What do people think of them?

In your country, what is the penalty for drug-dealing? Do you agree with this? Why/why not?

Do you think Chris can return to a 'normal life'? Why/why not?

How do you think Chris's parents would react if they found out about his business? What do you think they would do?

Why is Chris so busy over the weekend?

Chris said he had a couple of 'close calls'. What do you think he means by this?

He also talks about encountering some 'shady characters'. What kind of people do you think he is talking about?

Chris talks about people losing their homes and their jobs because of drugs. How do you think this happened?

What does Chris mean by 'returning to a normal life'?

Are drugs a serious problem in your country? What can be done about it?

Are all drugs bad? Are they all the same? Why do you think this?

Some drugs are now legal in some parts of the world. Could drugs be legal in your country? Why/why not?

Do you know anyone who had used drugs? Have you used drugs?

Are cigarettes and alcohol drugs? Why/why not?

Why are cigarettes and alcohol legal in most countries, but not other drugs?

The Pros and Cons of Drug Dealing

This is a whole class activity.

Try to think of all the advantages and disadvantages of being a drug dealer.

Make note of all your findings below:

The Pros	The Cons

Don't just think of legal or financial reasons. Think of other things like social prestige, how family and friends would regard it, being your own boss.

Think of as many different reasons as you can.

Debate: Legalise All Drugs!

This is a debate activity.

Divide the class into two teams of equal number. Choose a student to be the chairperson – this person will chair the debate and ensure order.

The Situation

Your country is considering legalising all drugs. They feel this would be a progressive thing to do.

But they are putting this to a vote with the public.

In your class, you have the opportunity to debate this topic and decide if legalising drugs is a good idea – or a very bad one.

Team A

You are very much opposed to legalising drugs in your country. You think this is a terrible idea that can only lead to more trouble.

Team B

You think legalising drugs is a great idea. The government and police have lost the war on drugs. It is time to just legalise all the drugs and let people decide for themselves.

Below is a list of pros and cons for legalising drugs. Take a look at these and use them in your team to make a strong argument in the debate.

Pros	Cons
The war on drugs creates addicts	Legalising drugs creates addicts
You can't win the war on drugs – so just regulate it!	It sends out the message that drugs are safe to use – they are not!
If the drugs are legalised, then they are regulated. Therefore, safer.	It will encourage more people to take drugs.
Personal freedom. Freedom of choice for the people!	It would make drugs seem acceptable to children!
The government can put a tax on all drugs sold and make a lot of money for other purposes.	It would make the country a drug-taking tourist attraction!
Crime would be greatly reduced. The drug-dealing gangs would go out of business.	There would be an increase in drug-taking and driving offences. This would mean more accidents on the road!
Police resources could be used for other things.	People's health could suffer. This would be a big problem for hospitals and the health service.

Each team should go through all the points above. Think of strong lines of argument you can put forward in the debate.

Try to think of what the other team will argue in the debate so you can have a response to that too.

When you are ready – begin the debate!

Role Play

This is a role play activity.

There are two characters in the role play:

Chris

You are Chris in the story at the beginning of the lesson. You have been caught by the police and arrested. They have notified your next-of-kin – one of your parents. You have been left alone to talk with your mother or father in private.

Chris's mother or father

You are Chris's mother or father (you can choose which one) and the police have called you as you are the next-of-kin. You are having a private conversation with Chris and you want to get some answers. You are angry – but you are also very concerned and want the best for Chris as he is in trouble.

The Situation

Chris's illegal activities have finally caught up with him. The police have been watching him for months and have now arrested him. He has been told by a lawyer that he could face ten years in prison.

Chris is in a holding cell awaiting trial and one of his parents comes to visit him.
It is the time for truth, so Chris has to reveal everything.
But his mother and father want to help him as best they can. They are angry but he is still their son.

In pairs, take some time to prepare your role play.

When you are ready, you can show the class.

Writing

You are Chris in the story at the beginning of the lesson.

You have been sent to prison for ten years for drug dealing. You have had a lot of time to think about what you have done and the effect it has had on your parents.

You are going to write a letter to express how sorry you are to them.

Tell them that you have learned a valuable lesson.

When you have written your letter, you can read it out loud in front of the class.

Or you can hand it to your teacher for feedback.
